b. designees reviewed two films with a view to their possible use or in overseas training.

(1) reviewed "Face of Red China" and concluded that it contains good background information for instructors, but is not suitable for showing to indigenous trainees.

(2) On 5 February several members of the Overseas Branch reviewed "London Calling North Pole," an Italian film based on Giske's book of the same title. Although the dialogue was in Italian, the English subtitles were clear and comprehensive. The scenario did not accurately follow Giske's account, and in typical Italian and Hollywood fashion included a beautiful female agent and the thread of a love story. While these additions proved entertaining, they were largely responsible for the distortion of the original story. The ideological ending, which was an extension of Giske's moral white-wash of himself, might cause some problems if this film were shown to low-level indigenous trainees; however, if combined with lectures on compartmentation and operational security and with a reading of the original book, the film would have training value.

f. I also queried PO/TR as to whether the extensions requested by [REDACTED] and the second tour requested by [REDACTED], were coordinated with OTR. PO/TR said that the requests had been approved, that FE Division did not coordinate these extensions with him, but would do so in the future on all training designated positions (total 45).

The first and largest group of documents comprised those which will be retained by the station and loaned to [REDACTED] for his background use; the second group contained those documents which in our opinion could be maintained for limited periods in the safe in [REDACTED] office; the third group included charts, slides and various documents which might be shown to the trainees; and the last group contained two documents which [REDACTED] will pass [REDACTED] for their use. These last are the "Protection of the Chief of State" paper and an unclassified document on records management.

25X1A9a deadline for returning comments on the sanitized glossary, (see WAR #3, 21 Jan., page 3) all have taken the trouble 25X1A14a to call and apologize and explain the delay. The comments of the PP Staff were delivered by [REDACTED] on 9 February, and he will visit us again on 11 February to discuss them. Particularly interesting is the following comment on [REDACTED]

25X1A14a [REDACTED]

25X1A9a [REDACTED] has very definitely staked out a CI claim to 25X1A14a [REDACTED] All ringside seats reserved. Immediate seating in the balcony!

b. Fingerprint Identification Crutch: Copies of the crutch text have been sent to FDD for translation into 25 languages. A copy also has been given to a contract agent for translation into Thai.

c. The Mapping and Compass Annex to the [REDACTED] 25X1A14a Guide is typed and the illustrations have been prepared and mounted. After a final check by the "editorial board," it will be sent to Reproduction for offset printing. In response to a request from G/OS, a carbon copy was prepared with duplicates of as many as possible of the illustrations.
This, together with a pertinent Army Field Manual, will be used by an instructor next week in a training project in Washington.

25X1A9a d. Case History: Several weeks ago [REDACTED] brought 25X1A2d2 in five folders of material pertaining to an EE Division operation known as [REDACTED] He asked 25X1A6a whether it might be prepared as a case history for use in PM training [REDACTED] [REDACTED] who was assigned the job about two weeks ago, has developed a detailed ten-page outline presenting all important aspects of the case in chronological order. He is now typing the outline in several copies, one of which will be reviewed by [REDACTED] 25X1A9a before we attempt the job of putting it into narrative form. 25X1A9a
